"In the Soviet Union most people believe he is in a very strong position already," Mr. Ulam said of Mr. Gorbachev, comparing his position to that of the former Soviet leader, Leonid I. Brezhnev, who led the Soviet Communist Party during the era of detente.

"But to my mind," Mr. Ulam kid, "it would not be right to say that he has the kind of influence Brezhnev had in the 70s, so he is still very limited in initiating his own peculiar style of foreign policy or domestic reform. WASHINGTON — .The Prince of Wales held a rare news conference Sunday, decreeing that his wife finds John Travolta to be a good dancer and that the prince himself finds George III to be a better king than Americans might admit.

Facing questioners with gentle precision, the heir apparent to the British throne deftly handled the one nonhistorical question on everyone's mind: how did his wife enjoy dancing with Mr. Travolta, who starred in "Saturday Night Fever," in the White House state dining room Saturday night?

The competition became obvious in the contrast between the way Mr. Arafat was received in Amman, Jordan, two weeks ago, when he met with Hussein for the first time since the hijacking on Oct. 7 of the cruise ship Achille Lauro, and the way Mr. Arafat was received in Cairo last week by President Hosni Mubarak.

Hussein treated Mr. Arafat coolly, not even offering to let him stay in a government guest house and not joining him in any final statement after their talks. Mr. Mubarak extended a red-carpet reception and even brought Mr. Arafat

Unless you are willing to squeeze and twist your company to suit a particular machine's capabilities.

Which can, of course, result in a rather uncomfortable situation.

At IBM, we haven't forgotten why these computers were called "personal" in the first place.

We've created an entire family of PCs for small, medium and larger businesses.

And they're all expandable. So you grow with your PC – not out of it.

If your organisation is just starting out (you being the whole show), consider our original Personal Computer.

It can help free your overworked brain from repetitive tasks, such as typing and retyping, accounting and classing information.

Giving you more time to get on with creative work.

For businesses with bulging filing cabinets, we suggest the Personal Computer XT.

It can store over 5,000 pages of information such as client names and addresses, or those facts and figures that help you make brilliant financial decisions.

And the PC XT gives you even more options for future growth.

Then there's our Super PC, the Personal Computer AT.

It's the most powerful, fastest IBM PC of them all (up to three times faster than early PCs), and can serve as the centre for a whole network of IBM Personal Computers.

Finally, if your company uses a big IBM system, try the 3270 Personal Computer. It lets you tap into applications from your mainframe computer one minute, and run PC programs the next.

The members of the IBM Personal Computer family are a very compatible group.

That means just about all the software, displays or printers you buy for one can be used on any of the others.

And while each of our computers was designed to fill a specific business need, they all have one thing in common: IBM's uncommon reputation for quality and dependability.

As well as our famous after-sales service, and a 12-month warranty.

U.S. Counties Challenge Cities for Power

New York Timas Service
NEW YORK — Four years after President Ronald Reagan began dismantling federal domestic programs, a new order of local government has begun to emerge as once-dormant counties in many areas challenge cities for pre-eminence.

Through legislation, budget cuts, and executive orders, the Reagan administration has virtually ended the relationship the U.S. government had built, through direct grants, with local governments over two decades.

Instead, it returned responsibility to the states, leading to turbu-lent change at the local level. The cities have historically been at odds with the states over local autono-

But now the expanding county governments, long favored by state legislatures, are joining the revoludemanding more taxing authority and complaining of having to carry out state orders without the resources to do it.

In the process, the counties. which once represented primarily rural populations but are now deeply involved with gritty urban problems, appear to be gaining political power, both at the state and national levels. A broader significance, however, is that the states will come under considerably more pressure to grant autonomy to local govern-ments. In the past counties have not been active on this issue. "It has been a quite rapid devo-

An example, he said, is that states crowd county jails when state prisons overflow but do not give the counties adequate funds to expand their jails.

Judges Boycott Rites For Colleagues Slain During Bogotá Siege

By Joseph B. Treaster

New York Times Service
BOGOTA — The 12 judges who survived a 27-hour siege at Colont-bia's Justice Ministry last week have boycotted an elaborate me-morial service for the scores of people who died.

The judges, who said they stayed away to protest the government's handling of the crisis, were joined in the boycott by most of the relatives of 11 slain justices.

A 12th member of the 24-member Supreme Court died of a heart

In a brief address at the memorial service, held Sunday in Colom-bia's main cathedral and attended by hundreds of government offi-cials and scores of foreign diplo-mats, President Belisario Betancur sought to explain his decision not to negotiate with the leftist rebels who seized the justice building shortly before noon on Wednes day. The rebels were members of a group known as M-19.

He suggested he had had no al-

The government has issued no report on the number of people killed in the ministry, but according to numerous accounts about 100 people died.

Speaking at the end of a mass led by Bogota's archbishop, Mario Re-bollo, Mr. Betancur said that while he mourned the loss of life, the tragedy had "fortified the principle of legality."

"The choice," the president said, "is between democracy and terrorism, between the law and anarchy, between liberty and fear."

Mr. Betancur, 61, who was elected three years ago on a pledge to bring an end to Colombia's long guerrilla war, had several times ne-gotiated with rebel groups on the terms of a cease-fire. In response to rebel demands in the peace talks, he had pardoned and freed hundreds of captured rebels.

In a meeting Saturday with Jus-tice Minister Enrique Parejo, the surviving judges said that not only would they not take part in the memorial on Sunday, but also that they did not want government offitalked with the judge and with some of the rebels. Mr. Parejo reiterated that the government had offered the renersafe passage and a "fair trial" to exchange for their surrender. The justice minister and he understood the anger of the judges and the relatives of the sign judges toward the government. "If I were a relative," he said. "I would probably feel the same way.

■ Rebels Explain Raid Leaders of the M-19 group said in a clandestine meeting with sever-al foreign journalists Sunday that they took over the Justice Ministry in a bid to draw attention to their cause, and were summed by the government's decision to end the takeover by force, United Press International reported from Bogota.

A rebel leader who called himself Alfonso said the group had stanned to hold the Justice Palace for a few hours and then negotiations for the release of the judges. "We never expected the bestiality of driving tanks through the front door," said the rebel leader, a member of M-19's 35-member national board of directors. The gnerrilla leaders denied goverument charges that the takeover was financed by drug traffickers and allegations that they executed II Supreme Court judges after the final army assault began.

Alfonso said the Soviet-aligned group wanted the judiciary to rule on a 52-page "lawsuit" drafted by the rebels that accused Mr. Betancur of not complying with a peace agreement. The rebels broke off a cease-fire agreement with Mr. Betancur's government in June after charging the army had repeatedly violated the truce.

Alfonso said rebels took over the building "because it was the only way they would listen to us in the cials to attend any burial services way they would listen to us in the for their slain colleagues.

Marcos Aide Expects 10-Year Insurgency that it would take at least a decade before the Communist insurgency could be contained in the Philip-pines. His estimate differed sharply with that made last week by President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Mr. Enrile said he believed that Mr. Marcos's prediction that the insurgency would be defeated in one year had been made "to buoy up the confidence of the nation."

The struggle will go on for a long time." Mr. Enrile said. It could be a matter of a few years. It could be decades. It will be at least a decade before the situation is.

Asked in an interview Oct. 31 for his prediction about the counterinsurgency drive, Mr. Marcos said: "In one year we'll wipe them out, if we get the proper backing from both governments and the compen-sation military package."

He was referring to military aid from the United States that is in-cluded in a $900-million compensation package for the use of two large bases in the Philippines.

Meeting reporters Monday, Mr.

Enrile said: "He's the president and I'm not. I would rather take a more cautious approach than that, have warned that the insurgency with due respect to my president," could reach a position of parity

On Oct. 25, General Fidel C. And if the International Monetary Fund, a professional creditor, is becoming unpopular, it can console itself with the reflection that its role is to influence people rather than make friends.

Still, the debtors' complaints merit close attention. A response of sorts was made by the U.S. Treasury last month. Will the U.S. proposal give the debtors more room to expand their economies? Or does it, like Europe's architects a couple of centuries ago, simply make the room look bigger by putting mirrors at both ends? One hopes it will herald an increase in the flow of sorely needed funds to the debtors. When the rhetoric is interpreted, however, it seems clear that America is not proposing to soften the conditions on which the funds are granted. Many of the debtor governments represent fragile democracies that have taken bold initial steps to reverse the economic collapse that their military predecessors fostered. ence of runaway price increases. Inflation in these countries is unlikely to match North American or European rates in the near future, but it must come down from triple-digit heights. Most debtors want to move away from state control toward freer market conditions, but local enterprise is unlikely to flourish when high inflation and the resulting political instability make risktaking investment foolbardy. And inflows of foreign private capital are discouraged by the economic and social chaos that threatens when money has no lasting value.

It would be enormously useful if governments in the rich world stepped up spending on aid. But the shaming truth is that aid hit a bad patch long ago from which it will not emerge soon. So debtors have little choice but to seek private funds from abroad.

The rich governments can do something, at relatively small expense, to help the indebted in this quest. They can devise arrangements to reduce the immediate burden of interest payments. They can draw up new multilateral schemes to guarantee business capital flowing from north to south. They can cautiously modify regulations that inhibit fresh bank lending to the debtors.

But all that depends for its success on orderly financial conditions inside the debtor countries. Disorder will simply make new capital flow out again as fast as it comes in, because with high inflation those lucky enough to earn more than a subsistence income will always send it abroad for safety. This is why the debtors have to resolve the dilemma between soft political options and the pursuit of hard economic policy.

An Editor in Trouble for Doing His Job

C APE TOWN —A prominent South African newspaper editor once said that editing was like walking blindfold through a mine field. That was in the 1950s. He should try editing now.

The government has spent 38 years tinessing a form of press control that places on newspapers the onus to publish at their peril, but severely limits our leaves to inform readers on vital limits our leeway to inform readers on vital matters. It is a twilight world of press freedom. The conventional wisdom among South African journalists has been that if you are light on your feet, lucky and work hard, the public can still be informed with a degree of adequacy.

The ordinary process of simply publishing news as it breaks is foreign to South African conditions, particularly now.

A prime example is the provision in the Internal Security Act that forbids publication of any utterance by a person who has been banned by the state. Banning has been described as civil death, since it restricts a person's movements and associations. Although there are more excessive forms of dealing with dissent in the "less-free" parts of the world, the South African banning system is, to my knowledge, unique.

Anyone who quotes a banned person is in big trouble. The penalty is up to three years in prison, with no statutory provision made for a line, although sentences can be suspended. Editors maintain up-to-date file boxes in their of-fices to check whether people are banned. It is not difficult to quote a banned person by

There were compelling public-interest reasons for the publication. Prominent South Africans have been queuing up to see Mr. Tambo and his senior aides as the South African crisis of unrest and economic downturn bites hard into white confidence and as support for the ANC among

ATHENS — It was no doubt co-incidental that U.S. Undersec-retary of State Michael Artmicist arrived in Athens to talk to Andreas

Papandreou's Socialist government about the future of four U.S. military bases on Oct. 28, a national holiday known colloquially as "No Day" in memory of Greece's rejection of an Italian was phismanness (23)

Still, Mr. Armacost evidently left without any assurances from the government regarding the continued operation of bases beyond mid-1990.

concerned about the high visibility of this base, as it has been overtaken by the suburbs, making it a focus of

From one point of view, Mr. Pa-

Armacost came to town, 350,000 civil 1981, is another question.

Analysts speculate on a possible government strike a moderate note.

Mr. Tambo seemed to be a black African moderate in the mold of a Kenneth Kaunda or Julius Nyerere. A 68-year-old grandfatherly fig-ure, he looked to me more like the last white hope in South Africa than the Communist-terrorist demon presented to South Africans by the government-controlled broadcasting services. I described him as a reluctant revolutionary.

The key point is that it would be far easier for whites to settle with a man like him than with the bitter young militants who are rising through the ranks of the ANC. So the deal is urgent.

Even making due allowance for a measure of tactics (he was clearly out to impress his London audience with his moderation), the view emerged of a man quite unlike the one presented to South Africans through misleading quotes selected by the government and its supporting media. The interview was presented to our readers as part of the mosaic of viewpoints, ranging from far right to far left, that the Cape Times publishes.

It was as simple as that. Since I had had brushes with the law about quoting banned persons, I knew the possible consequences.

Publishing Mr. Tambo's views can only contribute to the inevitable peace process: A greater understanding of mutual positions can only help black and white to find accommodation. The incident could even serve to move the government to amend its cumbersome and oppressive ways, so that, unlike the white Rhodesians who were kept in the dark until the day Robert Mugabe took over — white South Africans at least will know what they are up against. So if the price to be paid for trying to serve the N EW YORK — Ten years ago this week, the United Nations General Assembly, in one of its mindless flights from rational discourse, adopted the infamous canard that "Zionism is a form of racism." Attacks on Israel and on Zionism have consumed more time and attention of the United Nations and its various bodies than any other subject - more time than the problems of world hunger, poverty, genocide, hu-man rights violations, the threat of nuclear war, terrorism or the fight against disease and social disorder. Why the focus on Zionism and Israel? Of all the issues facing the conscience of the world, why this one? It is not enough to say that the Middle East is an important region, or that Jerusalem and the holy places are important to all peoples of the world. That would not explain the concentration of hostility, or the refusal of the nations of the region to address their differences with Israel through peaceful negotiation. The attack on Zionism and Israel derives from a fundamental hostility to a Jewish presence in the Jews' ancient homeland. It is fueled above all by anti-Jewish prejudice. The "Zionism Is Racism" slogan is grounded in anti-Semitism and its propagation is itself a manifestation of racism. The slogan's supporters have taken a political issue — the dispute be-tween Israel and its neighbors — and turned it into an emotional crusade against an entire people and religion.

The Arab states, with the exception of Egypt, refuse to accept the legitimacy of Israel or to resolve differences through negotiation. Their media and official spokesmen maintain a drumbeat of anti-Semitism, sometimes crude, sometimes subtle, that poisons the minds and inflames the passion of their peoples. Little free expression, debate or disagreement is permitted in these countries. With few exceptions, the small Jewish communities that remain in Arab nations live in fear of persecution.

Why, then, can these enemies not face the reality of modern Zionism?

Why cannot they accept that the Jewish people have a right to live in peace and dignity in their ancient places and that the right-thinking peoples of the world will support them in that endeavor? Zionism provides a model for democratic living that offers hope for progress to those who would accept it, and a promise of good will and respect for those who respect it. Israel: Friends' Efforts to Help Can Be Overdone

WASHINGTON — Old-timers tin might be. The big buyers are holding off to see what happens next. Parallels between tin in Congress thought they would never see the day. The Senate Appropriations Committee was meeting routinely to "mark up" the foreign operations bill. A couple of Israel's faithful friends, Robert Kasten of Wisconsin and Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, had slipped a provision into the Israeli-aid program that they claimed would add another $500 million or so in economic aid without costing U.S. taxpayers anything.

Business as usual, you might say. U.S. aid to Israel gets bigger every year, systematically, thanks to an endlessly energetic Israeli lobby. But this time the system didn't work. This time the Israeli issue gave way to the burning issue of budget balancing and the public debt. This time there was a real, honest-to-God fight, with some of Israel's best friends saying.

in effect: Enough is enough. "Enough" in this case is something close to $3.8 billion annually. Economic assistance in the current fiscal year would be about $1.2 billion, up from $785 million only three years ago. Military aid would total $1.8 billion, up from $1.4 billion last year. Contrary to past practice when the Israelis had to pay for at least part of it, it now comes entirely in the form of grants. To help underwrite Israel's economic recovery efforts, a special $1.5-billion fund has been awarded. half of it in a supplemental appropriation to last year's aid and the other half in the current fiscal year. But that is not enough for Senators Kasten and Inouye, who wrote into the original bill a "buy down" of the interest that Israel pays on its loans from the United States, from about 11.5 percent to 5 percent. The saving to Israel, in effect a gift from Washington, would be $531,710,682.

But the U.S. government, under its financial workings, would have to pay for it. In an effort to seem not to be breaking through the budgetary ceiling for foreign aid, Senators Inouye and Kasten did a little figgerypokery with unused funds of the Export-Import Bank, which conven-iently totaled around $500 million.

By Philip Geyelin

It all looks so innocent that you would hardly know that Israel would be getting a whopping increase in U.S. aid. Except that Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark Hatfield did know. So did Lawton Chiles, the Florida Democrat whose responsibility as ranking member of the Budget Committee makes him especially deficit-conscious. And so did the new director of the Office of Management and Budget, James C. Miller 3d.

Mr. Miller deplored the use of "accounting gimmicks that will distort" Export-Import Bank budgeting. Aid to Israel is already at "extraordinary levels," he argued. And the "buy down" would "set a costly precedent" for other borrowers. Senator Hatfield said that if there was an odd $500 million lying around in the foreign aid budget, there were American farmers who could use it. Senator Chiles pointed out that the Inouye-Kasten provision, while applicable only to this year's aid program, would almost certainly become a fixture; cutting it out next time around in an election year is not something Congress would be likely to do. So Congress would be committing itself to spending $7 billion over the lifetime of the Israeli loans to compensate for the "buy down." The outcome of the Inouye-Kasten ploy is in doubt. At some point it will go to the Senate floor, where opposition to the Export-Import Bank bookkeeping may prompt its sponsors to look for the money elsewhere in the aid program. With most of the larger beneficiaries pretty much untoochable, the task of finding $500 million in a program which itself totals only around $15 billion would probably mean wiping out some country programs entirely. This affair is all the more remarkable because Israei neither requested the "buy down" nor actively supports it, according to embassy spol They don't quite say that if the issue turns in their favor they won't be smiling all the way to the bank, but you get a certain sense that they, too, feel that enough is enough — that more would be pushing their luck. What is going on here would appear to be yet one more example of israel's best friends in America being more Israeli than the Israelis. Washington Post Writers Group.

Bad Economic Medicine

With the economic medicine you prescribe for Europe's unemploy-ment woes in the editorial "Hope for Europe's Jobless?" (Oct. 29), Europeans would do well to seek a second opinion before agreeing to surgery. You argue that an American cure would boost income demand and jobs. But the social and fiscal probems now faced by Sunbelt cities like Houston, bursting at the seams with destitute migrants from the depressed Snowbelt, are suggestive of the dangers in such a prescription.

The image of the once-proud steelworker and family now forced to survive on a minimum-wage service sec-tor income is illustrative of the best that the so-called economic recovery has offered many Americans. For many more, particularly black and female, chronic poverty and infant mortality rates approaching Third World levels have become characteristic of an urban dynamic that creates appalling numbers of homeless in the midst of "urban revitalization." Saint Laurent, Ungaro, Valentino and Armani

Experts agree that you don't go to New York looking for creativity; what is important is to sell American designers are great fashion pro-cessors, taking a little here, a little there and ending up with clothes perfectly suited to their market.

The Saint Laurent spencer suit, with contrasting buttons, is all over the map, and so is his love for jersey. Valentino contributed all sorts of little sweaters and Ungaro's draped dresses were also highly visible.

At the other end of the spectrum, Raiph Lauren and Calvin Klein's vision of womanhood is solidly rooted in American sportswear tradition. Lauren, however, is chang-ing his tune from American prairie to a soft, American version of Dearville in the 1920s - the kind of dress that would have suited Great Gatsby beroines.

He began his collection last week with simple, long silk dresses in ren's subtly seductive style. Lauren, who already has a shop in London. is opening in Paris on the Rue Royale in March. Calvin Klein (not to be confused with Anne Klein, an American sportswear line designed by Louis dell'Olio) also scored with a look inspired by the casual, slouchy chic of Katharine Hepburn. Although there were far more pants shown in this country than in Europe, Calvin Klein is the only designer who can deliver mannish tailored suits with a distinct degree of grace. This is due, in part, to the authority of his cut as well as the paper-thinness of his fabrics. His collection this sea-pantsuits and silk turtlenecks.

The silhouette in most American collections is without surprises short, close to the body, but not contouring the curves, since Azze-dine Alaia has not been publicized enough in this country to have made an impact yet. The palette is softer and more pastel than last winter, and many of the collections have a dull-edged, perfectly commencial ring.

Martha Philips, who as chairman of the Martha fashion salons is the savvy doyenne of American fash-ions, defined the New York collections as "very wearable and smart."

"I was very impressed with the colors, which are flattering, both to the face and the body," she said, "but I think there should be more of a new note,"

This need for a new direction has not affected the establishment designers, Geoffrey Beene, Bill Blass and Oscar de la Renta, who more chuding lots of evening pajamas. Beene's best dress was longwaisted and skinny, with a scooped out, T-shirt neckline. Tailored suits were softened by fringed silk

Blass' clothes basically cater to top-dollar and conservative clients who want to look pretty without rocking the boat. Among those those attending the shows were the television personality Barbara Wal-ters in a red Blass, Pat Buckley in a green Blass, and Nancy Kissinger, who has lately shifted allegiance to

The sweater was the stronges trend in this collection. Twin sets in pastel colors were lined or trimmed with print silks. Pale cashmere sweaters had aleeves embroidered with black lace flowers. Red cashmere sweaters had white cuffs and Peter Pan collars, which gave them a would-be ingenue look. Evening sweaters were lined with the same taffeta as the big billowy skirts

As Philip Miller, chairman of Marshall Field in Chicago, put it: "It's a great collection and right on target, Blass' sense of color was terrific. I think he has style and taste and a sense of luxury."

De la Ranta was the most European in his approach, and his clothes were a clever digest of Paris trends. Although simple in design, they had a few more ruffles and generally a more tender finish than

De la Renta's admiration for Saint Laurent was obvious in the jersey outfits that dominated his collection. But he added his own hand to crisp, sharp navy-and-white or black-and-white outfits.

Carolina Herrera is a South American socialite who has made it both in the stores and the soirces in five short years. Her clothes, which usually feature prominent sleeves, have a well-groomed finish to them. Made of expensive fabrics, they are the typical, grand-entrance

Perry Ellis discarded his favorite big shapes for closer-to-the-body clothes. This collection was sweet short and to the pretty point, with lean belted Chinese dresses, Capri pants teamed with simple white shirts, and sweaters covered with dragons and apple blossoms. The collection, which Ellis said was inspired by his collection of Chinese antiques, was carried out in cela don green and ivory white.

Karl Lagerfeld, who makes an American sportswear line, was showing for the second time in the United States, with a collection that was a digest of shapes shown earlier in Paris. The collection, which was better received than his last one, had a Parisian sense of fun, often missing in American col-lean, sexy and athletic look. It was a limited but highly attractive line, enhanced by a sober color scheme (black, navy and white, with an occasional gray) and out-standing accessories, including high-tech silver jewelry designed by Robert Lee Mouris.

Two other women designers also made their mark last week: Norma Kamali, with a Victorian look, and Caroline Rochm, formerly at de la Renta's, with her mentor's spirit of deluxe clothes that look richer than

'Creole' Version of 'Giselle' a Success In Harlem Dance Theater's Paris Visit

International Herald Trabune

PARIS — Taking classics out of their original context has become a favorite theatrical sport in recent years, but very few such transpositions have worked as beautifully and sensibly as the Dance Theater of Harlem's so-called "creole" version of "GIcalled "creole" version of "Giselle," which was the centerpiece of the company's opening program of a two-week stand in the Paris successful "Giselle" must have. Dance Festival.

This production, now a little more than a year old, transplants the story from the medieval Rhineland to the bayou country of antebellum Louisiana. Correspondences have been found that keep the story intact, the choreography has been respected as it has come down to us - from the 1841 Paris premiere to St. Petersburg and ck - and this attractive company has a genuine novelty that none-theless retains the atmosphere that makes "Giselle" the ultimate Romantic ballet.

Arthur Mitchell, the company's founder and director, and Carl Michel, who designed this production, profess to have found that pre-Civil War Louisiana had a highly stratified society of free blacks, so the social barriers that separate Giselle and Albert remain plausible. Furthermore, there seem to be bayou legends about spirits that resemble the Wilis of the second act, the spirits of young girls who died of disappointment in love, As a pretext for a harvest celebration, sugar cane is as good a crop as anything that grows in the Rhine valley.

bayon country is remote and inherently mysterious and romantic. Mi-chel has created evocative sets, dripping with moss and humidity, and colorful and varied costumes. The parallel between this "Giselle"

Of course, there is the music of Adolphe Adam and the choreography that has descended from the original of Coralli and Perrot. It has been adapted for this produc-tion by Frederic Franklin, whose memory of it goes back to the Markova-Dolin company of the 1930s. The basic text is kept relatively unclustered in this handsome version, both main and secondary characters are sharply delineated, and it is appealingly danced by this company.

Stephanie Dabney attractively headed one of the two casts in the title part, and Donald Williams, as Albert, was flamboyantly convincing as a scion of the bayou aristocracy. Lorraine Graves was an unshakably authoritarian Myrtha and Keith Saunders an effective Hilarion. The Lamoureux Orchestra was conducted by Boyd Staplin.

The company continues at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées through Sunday with its second program, including Talley Beatty's "Caravanserai," Glen Tetley's "Voluntaries" and Geoffrey Holder's "Dougla."

Meanwhile, a far more remote piece of Paris dance history has been revived by the Paris Opera Ballet with a high-spirited program at the Saile Favart that pairs Pierre Gardel's "La Dansomanie" with excerpts from the third act of Bournonville's "Napoli."

Gardel is nowadays hardly more than a name in the dance histories, but he succeeded his brother as director of the Paris Opera Ballet in

In any case, there is nothing realistic about "Giseile." What is more to the point than history is that the with a plot whose invent is true to Molière's "Beargeon Crontinhommen" except that the main character has a mania for dather instead of literature and refuse, his daughter's hand to an infantity some onel because he cannot dance although he learns britism!. > The ballet comes back to Paris now via Stockholm, where it was staged in 1804 by a bailet master who had studied with Gardei, had seen "La Dansomanie" in Paris and made notes about the staging. In addition, Ivo Cramer, who has recreated the work here as he did in Stockholm (using Mary Skeeping's choreography for some numbers, reports that he also found 1 rehearsal violin part with the action described measure for measure. So one can probably assume that this is as faithful a work of balletic archaeology as can be expected.

> In any case, "La Dansomanie" is great fun and it got a lively first performance Saturday with Georges Piletta as the dance-crazy gentleman, Patrice Bart as the colo-nei, Monique Loudières the daugh-ter and Jean-Pierre Franchetti as the dancing master. Patrice Cau-chetier's period costumes had the right parodistic touch, and the sets were modeled on those of the theater at Drottninghoim.

Any similarity with our newly enlarged Zurich Airport is purely intentional.

As you can see, the similarity between a Swiss Army Knife and Zurich Airport is striking. But not really surprising: both were constructed on the principle of offering the user as much as possible in a small space. So it's quite in keeping with the compact and practical infrastructure of Zurich Airport that it has now been enhanced by the enlargement of Terminal A and an extra 18 finger-docks - additions that are specially attractive to the passenger. swissair 47

Early in the film, Sting says he hopes it will show a bund bei formed, as opposed to other documentaries depicting other bands in their final stages of dissolution. But this isn't an egalitarian group in that sense, and the musicians know it better than Sting does. As the film progresses, however, the musi-cians' cautious deference toward Sting begins to disappear.

Odd Mix of New Contracts Jams Commodities Markets

By JAMES STERNGOLD

New York Times Service HICAGO — For a long time, the real battling in the commodities world was between the array of traders and investors who vied for profits in the "pits" on the exchange floors. Today, some of the hottest competitation place between the exchanges themselves tion is taking place between the exchanges themselves.

These are years of enormous change and coasolidation in the world of intures. Profit margins have been shrinking, volume in many areas has been in a slump and the competitors have become more aggressive than ever. Not only brokers and traders, but exchanges, too, are in a fight for survival.

New products are in the frontline of this battle between the exchanges. The exchanges lob new types of contracts at new types of contracts tracts at each other like artillery fire. The competition product innovation has spawned some pretty unusual ideas.

The search for

has in many regards just confused the public, which has been slowly withdrawing from the market. And even some floor traders complain privately that they are being overwhelmed by the piethora of products. But, in the view of the exchanges, the stakes are too high for them to slow down.

"It is kind of a hectic time for the exchanges," acknowledged Galen Burghardt, vice president for financial research at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. "Before, you had maybe one new contract a year. Now, you can easily have two, three, four or five.

It's a little hairy, actually."

The actual number of futures contracts available for trading has only increased to 87 from 79 a decade ago, according to the Futures Industry Association. But about 50 percent of today's products are different from what was around in 1975. And those numbers do not include the increasing number of options contracts. On average, only about one in every five new contracts

The search for product innovation has spawned some pretty musual ideas. Thomas C. Coleman, director of planning at the Chicago Board of Trade, said that he has received proposals for futures on tinned salmon, wooden railroad ties, insurance, electricity and television advertising time. At the Merc, Mr. Burghardt said some of the odder proposals have been on wine, fine china and even "illicit smokeables."

Mr. Coleman emphasized that one should not be too quick to dismiss new suggestions. He acknowledged that he questioned, at first, whether futures on crude oil would fly because there were so many different grades of oil traded, only to find that the futures

E CITED five basic criteria for determining if a futures contract was feasible: There must be a homogenous, or bellwether, unit for trading; an active underlying cash market that is sufficiently big to encourage people to insure against price risk; a high turnover in the cash market; a price volatility in the cash market and an interest of the cash market. volatility in the cash market, and an interest on the part of end users in ordering the product today for future delivery, known as forward contracting.

For example, Mr. Coleman said that a manium contract had been proposed and rejected for the time being because its price was too controlled by government regulators. Electricity looked

A Brother Magazine Is Born to Ebony

By Jonathan Hicks New York Times Service

NEW YORK - John H. Johnson, the 67-year-old founder and chairman of the Johnson Publishing Co., the largest black-owned company in the United States, had long resisted putting out a men's fashion magazine. But he changed his mind last summer, associates say, when he saw the splash made by such publications

This month, Johnson Publishing's Ebony Man, a slick monthly carrying articles on fashion, fitness and personal finance, is making its debut, in hopes of wooing the growing cadre of up-wardly mobile black men. Indeed, research indicates that nearly 22 percent of Esquire read-ers are black. And Gentlemen's Quarterly says 17 percent of its readers are black.

Man, the company's first new magazine in a dozen years, is not without risk. Although Johnson long ago established itself as a successful publisher of magazines for the black population - it also puts out Ebony and Jet - industry experts point to a dozen or more magazines aimed at black men in the last decade, most of which survived less than two years. Whether Johnson can at-

EC Challenges Japan's Rules on Alcohol Imports

Agence France-Presse
TOKYO — The European Community is making Japanese imports of alcohol from the EC a test case for its relations with Japan, Laurens Jan Brinkhorst, head of the EC delegation in Tokyo, said Monday. Last month the EC presented Ja-

About Buying Control of MBB

BMW Has Talks

By Warren Gerler monul Herald Tribune FRANKFURT — Bayerische Motoren Werke, the West German automaker, is negotiating with Ba-varian government officials about acquiring a controlling stake in Messerschmitt-Bolkow-Blohm, the country's leading aerospace con-cern, Bavarian officials said Monday. The Bavarian state government itself has a large stake — about 20 percent — in MBB. A link-up between the two Munich-based companies would be a further step toward consolidating West Germany's automotive and high-technology industries, follow-ing last month's apparently suc-cessful takeover bid of AEG AG, the electronics conglomerate, by Daimler-Benz AG, the maker of Mercedes automobiles and trucks. Bavarian Finance Ministry officials, speaking on the condition that they not be identified, said that there had been serious talks between the ministry and BMW about BMW acquiring a control-ling interest in MBB of up to 40 percent. This control would depend on the readiness of several state governments to sell a major part of their large holdings in MBB. Indus-try observers believe that control of MBB could be obtained in the 30-

40-percent-shareholding range. Obtaining a controlling interest in MBB, which is closely held and not listed on a stock exchange, would also depend on the willingness of several corporate shareholders, among them Krupp AG and Thyssen AG, the engineering groups, and two commercial banks, Bayerische Vereinsbank and Dresdner Bank, to sell some or all of their minority holdings in MBB

Both Krupp and Thyssen are known in industry circles to be ea-ger to divest themselves of their MBB holdings, which total less than 10 percent, and both commercial banks have indicated that their total 10-percent holding in MBB may be temporary. Eberhard von Kuenheim, BMW's chairman, had said at a press conference last week that the large governmental stake in MBB

Malaysian Metals Firm Japanese Industry Responding to Effects of a Lower Dollar Suspends LME Dealings By John Burgess Weathington Post Service By John Burgess Washington Post Service By John Burgess Washington Post Service Low of 2022 year. Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches . LONDON - MMC Metals, one of 27 floor dealers in tin, suspended all dealings on the London Metal Exchange on Monday, throwing London's metals markets into further turmoil.

The company is owned by the Malaysian Mining Corp. — one of the world's biggest producers of tin - and the announcement prompted speculation that Malaysia may withdraw support for the International Tin Council, the 22-member body that governs tin prices.

MMC Metals was established in 1983. Before that, Malaysia used existing dealers for trading. The company has been mainly active in tin and is believed to have acted Monday to protest the LME's decision to reopen tin trading Nov. 18.

Trade sources pointed to the fierce "tug-of-war" between those LME members who want an early resumption of tin trading and those with a heavy exposure in tin, such as MMC Metals, and who want to wait for positive signals from the

The crisis was ignited Oct. 24 when the ITC announced that it no longer had the money to prop up tin prices and blamed overproduc-

In La Paz on Monday, the mining minister. Sinforoso Cabrera, said that Bolivia's major in mines have been ordered to reduce output. The country's planning minister, Guillermo Bedregal, said that the trading crisis and collapse in tin prices threatened to plunge Bolivia into "a tremendous depression."

Meanwhile in Kuala Lumpur, a leading mine official said that many small Malaysian tin mines have been forced to close or scale down operations.

Hew See Tong, president of the Perak Chinese Miners Association, said that no figures on actual mine closures would be available until the Mines Department completes its monthly census at the end of November.

Malaysia had 449 mines in operation at the end of last year.

tronics producer Toshiba Corp. has told employees to turn off office lights during the hunch break. C. Jush & Co., one of Japan's big trading houses, is dragging its feet in signing new contracts. Hiyashi Ceramics Inc. is preparing to petition the government for financial aid.

The strong dollar that helped power Japan's export surge of the past year and a half is gone for the time being. Its departure has had only minor effect to date on balance sheets here, but corporate managers are planning seriously for the possibility that it will not be returning soon.

Japan has had four bouts with a cheap dollar since the world shifted to a floating-rate currency system in 1973. Through each it has managed to prosper, albeit with some dislocations, and there is little reason to expect that things will be different for the fifth.

The dollar's latest decline began in late September, after the so-called Group of Five — the United States, Japan, Britain, West Germany and France - agreed to drive it down with coordinated intervention in foreign currency marend of last year. kets. The dollar was buying about (Reuters, AFP, UPI) 240 yen when the campaign began; plus will not be seen until the year swiftly to smaller export industries, ago. "Those who pay us by cash

A low dollar means that Japanese products tend to become more expensive for Americans and U.S. products cheaper for Japanese consumers. Japanese and U.S. officials hope that this will rein in a galloping trade imbalance between the two countries, which estimates say may reach $50 billion in Japan's favor this year.

To do that, however, the dollar must stay low and whether it will is anybody's guess. The five governments have vowed to keep up pressure in the markets, but skeptics say that long-term changes will require cuts in what are seen as fundamental causes of the strong dollar - U.S. interest rates and the federal government deficit.

Even if the U.S. currency does stay low, economists here predict, impact will come slowly. "The effects will not be seen in this fiscal year," which ends March 31, pre-dicts Kyoji Kitamura, a deputy vice minister at the Ministry of Finance. They will begin in the following

Mr. Kitamura says that the government's "highest priority" is to keep the ven strong. But this effort toward international goodwill has plunged companies here into a bewildering new financial maze. "We are changing all our assumptions," says a high-level executive at C. Itoh & Co., where negotiations for many purchase and sale contracts have been frozen pending stabilization of the exchange markets.

Major exporters were not caught cold when the dollar began its plunge, however. Some, like C. lioh, say they have turned some short-term profits with shrewd dealing as it slid. Longer-term protection has come through a skill learned years ago, smoothing out currency rate peaks and valleys with forward contracts from foreign exchange markets.

Dutch to Fully Open Capital Market by Jan. 1

AMSTERDAM - The Netherlands plans to liberalize its capital market fully by Jan. 1 in a bid to keep pace with liberalization in competing world financial centers.

A Finance Ministry spokesman confirmed on Monday a report in the Dutch economic daily, Financicele Dagblad, that full opening of the capital market was planned. Details would be announced Nov. 20 by Finance Minister Onno Ruding the spokesman added.

Financiele Dagblad said the plans included the introduction of floating-rate notes and zero-coupon bonds and permission for foreign banks to lead-manage domes-

The Dutch central bank's issue calendar - borrowers have to wait their turn to tap the market - will be abolished under the new regula-tions, Financiecle Dagblad said.

Under the proposed system, borrowers will be able to tap the market at any time, but only with central bank approval.

Capital-market sources said the need to preserve Amsterdam's position in the face of mounting competition from other markets was a major factor behind such plans as zerland and West Germany.

Dutch markets are already relatively open, with no capital restric-tions and borrowing in any currency allowed.

Capital-market sources said further liberalization had been widely expected since West Germany, the Netherlands' main financial competitor, introduced similar measures last May. Dutch plans would closely follow the West German moves.

The launching of zero-coupon bonds and floating-rate notes will necessitate the introduction of a universally acceptable official Amsterdam interbank offered rate to reflect the cost of overnight funds. Financicele Dagblad said commercial banks in Amsterdam and the Dutch central bank planned to issue a daily Aibor rate, in line with Libor and Fibor interbank rates offered in London and Frankfurt.

The Amsterdam capital market has an average daily turnover of more than 500 million guilders (about $170 million) in listed domestic bonds, on a par with Swit-

BMW Is Reported to Seek To Acquire Control of MBB

(Continued from Page 9) waiting a response from Mr. Kuenheim in the next week or two to see what conditions Mr. Kuenheim suggested for BMW to acquire a major stake in MBB. If these were "realistic," the officials said, the chances for an agreement were good. Sources close to Mr. Kuenheim at BMW headquarters confirmed that Bavarian government officials had approached the company to discuss the prospect of BMW buying into MBB. But BMW officials said no negotiations were under way with MBB's corporate share-holders, which, in addition to Krupp. Thyssen and the two com-mercial banks, include the West German electronics groups Sie-mens AG and Bosch AG, the West German insurer, Allianz AG, and the French aerospace group, Aero-

Internationally, a BMW-MBB linkage could boost the financial and technological competitiveness of West German automakers and weapons-builders in the wake of a series of major U.S. auto-aerospace mergers, including General Motors Corp.'s takeover of Hughes Aircraft Co. and Chrysler Corp.'s purchase of Gullstream Aerospace. In West Germany, a BMW-MBB linkup would be seen as an attempt by BMW to keep up in the technology race with its archrival. Daim-ler, which recently has made significant inroads into BMW's domestic market share. Moreover, a BMW-MBB linkup would signal an attempt by Bavaria to even the "high-tech" balance between the states of Baden-Württemberg --- where Daimler and its newly acquired Dornier GmbH and MTU Union aerospace subsidiaries are based — and Bavaria, where BMW and state government holdings, BMW's obtaining outright majority control was unlikely, said officials in Munich. Should BMW seek to obtain a share in MBB of more than 25 percent, Federal Cartel Office ap-proval would be required under West German law. For MBB, which is anxious to overcome its image of a sprawling arms giant, having BMW as major shareholder would provide a key link to the automotive field. MBB hopes to enter the automotive field as a supplier of automotive elec-tronics based on its expertise in cockpit technology for Airbus civil-ian aircraft and for Tornado fighter planes for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Earlier this year. MBB held talks with U.S.-based United Technologies Corp. about starting a major joint venture in auto electronics in West Germany. Recent developments — including the apparently imminent sale of UTC's ailing microchip unit, Mos-tek, and Daimler's imminent purchase of AEG - may have derailed those plans, however, as they in-volved both Mostek and an AEG

COMITÉ COLBERT Lanvin: A Sense of Style

Jeanne Lanvin was a remarkable lady. A milliner's apprentice at 13, in she developed into one of the legendary grande dames of French couture and founded a house that almost 100 years later still epitomizes the elegant simplicity and sense of onnamentation, the mixture of tradition and innovation symbolized by the gleaming black Art Deco boule flacon of the incomparable Lanvin fragrance, Arpège. "My sum lived surrounded by musicians, and poets", says Bernard Lanvin, great-nephew of the countrière and president of Lanvin Parhums since 1981. "She created a style that has always been with Lanvin and that I am trying to canne Lanvin's vibrant imagination celebrated the splendors of Art Deco from her sumpruous beaded dresses to the dazzling decoration of her private Parisian house designed in collaboration with Armand Rareau, which, co-sponsored by Lanvin Parfums, has been restored and is a star armaction of the newly renovated Musée des Arts Décoratifs in

Today Larrein has a world gross sales consolidated turnover of $160 million divided 30/70 percent between fragrance and fashion and its perennial craditions are marched by modernization from computerized systems to what Bernard Lanvin terms "a way of thinking adapted to the world in the 80s". From his great-sunt, an inveterate traveller, Lanvin has inherited a penchant for being on the move and circles the world studying how to develop the Lanvin style or jumps on his motorcycle to check out the competition at Parisian de-"The taste and approach to quality products is quite different in each country", says Lanvin. "It's fascinating to find out what they think in Kansas City. When you are creating new products, the biggest task is Fashion exports account for about 50 percent of sales while fragrance exports run at about 63 pettent. Burope, the United States and Southeast Asia are the principal customers.

Lanvin sees most scope for expansion in fashion. "Since my wife, Maryll, has taken over the artistic direction of Haute Country and ready-to wear, a younger spirit has enabled us to create a new wave of customers." This will be translated into more U.S. boutiques. There are 54 Lanvin boutiques worldwide with ones planned for Chicago, Houson and Los Angeles Linked to the image of young successful fashion-conscious executives, Larvin menswear is a market leader in the U.S., Japan and France where fashion spotters claim both presidential candidates in the last election campaigned in Lanvin shirts.

Since it was introduced in 1927, Arpège has been one of the world's top 10 perfumes. A new fragrance, being prepared for launch in 1987-88, close to the centennial of the house, will, like Arpège, have a reminiscence of Art Deco and be composed of a floral bouques of natural flowers, the blend of quality and simplicity that Lanvin says is so hard to arrain but remains the hallmark of the house. "Quality", says Lanvin, "is the name of the game".

Labor Costs Are Called Uncompetitive in U.K.

LONDON - The cost-competitiveness of British labor against that of the country's main trading rivals fell by more than 10 percent in the year to September, according to a study pub-lished Monday by the Confederation of British

The employers association said the new figures illustrated a need for smaller pay increases. The confederation is urging companies to cut pay increases by 2 percentage points from year-earlier levels. The study found British wages were rising more than twice as fast as the average in major competing countries. Growth

Business Week, Forbes was judged to be overall favorite by 44%, versus 29% for Business Week and 19% for Fortune.

When regular readers were asked which of the three reflects best the excitement of business, Forbes had twice the scores of the other two. And when asked which of the three stands for "free enterprise," 71% named Forbes, compared with 13% for Fortune and 7% for Business Week.

These results confirm surveys done over the past fifteen years showing that more officers in big business read Forbes regularly than either Fortune or Business Week.

As the graphs so eloquently show, Forbes is the most cost-effective business magazine for reaching America's most effective executives. If you want to reach this elite, not only is it good business for you to put your advertising in Forbes, it's bound to be good for your business.

Major Changes Planned At Omega Watch Unit

BIENNE, Switzerland - Omega, the troubled division of Switzer-land's leading watchmaker, is to be restructured after a string of losses this decade, its owners announced

The product range is to be re-duced, the work force cut by more than half and new marketing strategies introduced in a bid to put Omega back into profit by 1987.

Ernst Thomke, vice president of Société Suisse de Microélectronique et d'Horlogerie, whose other brands include Swatch, Tissot, ETA and Longines, said at a news conference that Omega had suffered from rising costs, overextend-

BA Expecting Fall in Annual Operating Profit

HONG KONG — British Airways PLC expects operating profit for 1985-86 to be slightly below last year's £303 million ($431 million) as a result of foreign-exchange translations and the grounding of aircraft for in-spection, its chief executive said

Monday in Hong Kong. The executive, Colin Marshall, said net profit in the fiscal year ending next March 31 would be about equal to the £202 million of 1984-85, which excluded extraordinary items. Net profit will be aided by foreign-exchange translations on the company's loans and assets.

Operating profit is earnings before tax and interest charges. Other airline officials said results were hurt by the strength of the pound, the temporary grounding of BA's fleet of Boeing 737s after a fire aboard a 737 in August in which 55 passengers died, and a mechanical problem with a Lockheed L-1011 TriStar.

Mr. Marshall said BA expected a fuel-price increase soon.

ed product line and lack of new ideas. He called Omega's plight a "clasdustry with all the consequences."

The division's operating losses were around 30.7 million Swiss francs ($14.3 million) last year. Pierre Arnold, chief executive of SMH, said the Swiss industry had made great strides since competi-tion from Japanese producers forced a 660-million-franc takeover by Swiss banks in 1983. Now back in private hands, the SMH group could expect to more than double its profit to 86.5 mil-lion francs in 1985, he said.

The low-priced, (ashionable Swatch had been a success, but the medium-to-higher-priced watches were still losing market share to the Japanese, Mr. Thornke said.

He said Omega could no longer let other companies, especially U.S. manufacturers, put their names on Omega watches. He added that Omega was looking at an integrated mechanism and case, adoption of which could halve output costs.

Mr. Johnson believes Ebony Man can succeed despite the fail-ures of similar magazines. He said those publications lacked the deep pockets necessary to publish long enough to become a fixture on the sstands, develop wide circulation and attract advertisers.

Further trouble has arisen in marketing of consumer products, long considered a strong point. seecham said, for example, that West German wholesalers had become overstocked on Odol mouthwash, partly because of marketing errors. In addition, Beecham has had weak performances from cosmetics and home-improvement

Despite the recent spate of takeovers of companies with brandname products, analysts said they believed a bid for Beecham was only a remote possibility. Based on the current share price, the company is valued at about £2.1 billion. Lord Keith said full-year pretax profit appeared likely to be about even with last year's £306.1 million.

Not until the late 1920s did manfacturers dare to advertise to women, but once they did, they portrayed the cigarette as a torch of freedom and a tool of beauty. In 1928, the makers of the Lucky Strike brand launched a campaign with the slogan, "Reach for a Lucky Instead of a Sweet," intro-corded a steeply rising rate of lung cancer in women since the 1960s. The American Cancer Society predicts that in 1985, more women (38,600) will die of lung cancer than of breast cancer (38,400). Lung cancer deaths in women already have surpassed breast cancer deaths in a dozen states, according to preliminary data. According to data, 75 to 90 percent of lung cancer cases are caused by smoking.

Lung cancer long has been the most common fatal cancer in men; this year, 87,000 American men are expected to die of it, government researchers say. Smoking also is be-heved to cause a third of all deaths from heart disease annually. Counting its toll from cancer, other lung disorders, heart disease and strokes, smoking is estimated to kill 320,000 Americans each year, more than the total U.S. death toll from all wars fought in this century. So enormous is the impact that a 1983 study in Public Health Reports, a journal of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, predicts that the difference in men's and women's life expectancy according to 1979 census data - soon will vanish because of women's smoking patterns.

The researchers found that life expectancies of nonsmoking men and women are almost identical. Women in the population at large have had a higher life expectancy, the researchers concluded, because fewer of them have been smokers.

When "women who have smoked as much as men reach the later decades of life," the 1983 re-port said, "the present differences in longevity between men and women will disappear."

A key factor preventing women from quitting once they start and possibly a motive for some to start — is nicotine's ability to sup-press hunger, said Ellen Gritz, associate director for research in cancer control at the University of California at Los Angeles...

THE MASTER OF THE FORGE: A West African Odyssey

By Harold Courlander. 224 pages. $16.95. Crown Publishers Inc., I Park Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

By Elizabeth Alexander

TUNDREDS of years ago in the western I Sudanese kingdom of Joliba, caretakers of local history were djelis: bards who preserved and sang their people's stories. Today, in Bethesda, Maryland, a novelist and folklorist named Harold Courlander writes that he "became the djeli of Numnkeba of Naraduga," the ancient folk-hero Courlander has created in his latest novel the ancient folk-hero Courlander has created in his latest novel.

"The Master of the Forge" is a prose epic that follows the blacksmith Numukeba on his 11-year journey from his village in search of honor and truth. His purpose? "I do not know what I am looking for, only that I am living out my story," says Numukeba, placing himself in a long line of heroes questing spiritually, as well are observed." well as physically.

Like England's Lancelot and Mali's Sun-

diata before him, Numukeba's venture be-comes an adventure, all in the name of honor and the faith that his "story" will guide him. He has cinematic encounters with evil, slays foes, does good deeds, and most importantly, augments the faith that sent him out in the first Numikeba is a sober, straightfaced hero. His philosophy is strongly delineated and appealing. Though Courlander lets him sound like a fortune cookie at times, he also quietly points to the larger lessons embedded in daily activities. Joliba is a world where ritual and community are profoundly respected. This strong sense of alliance and kinship makes Numnkeba's self-imposed odyssey all the more poignant. Indeed, in ancient Joliba, what goes around. comes around. A character is a slave one minute and a noble the next. At one point, Numukeba is changed into a dog by the wizard Etchuba. Courlander subtly and successfully challenges conventional social hierarchy through these transformations. Unfortunately, he does not extend the challenge to the world of women, who are scarcely mentioned and exist only to procreate, to heat and to just he

Courlander has some levely passages that trating his hero's reverence for the motor world, such as this monologue to a greet world, such as this monologue to a greet world.

"Have you discovered hone; in this wilder rhinoceros: ness? If so, tell me what it locks that it in invisible, where do you hade it. Does it has in your heart? And when you die and the value of the state of the stat claim your heart, where will tour heart to then? As Numukeba went on taking the thinoceros dropped to his forekness and then lay on the earth, watching and intening. Creating a world in which one has never Creating a world in which one has never lived is no easy task. The Master of the Forge" is filled with details, but at times the are cliches, evocative of "Africa" through stock words and a disease of "Africa" through stock words and a disease of "Africa" through stock words and a clipped, formal diction, as in this opening paragraph:

"Numnkeba, the blacksmith forged 21 perforge, completing the last iron link for his visit of chain mail. He heated it to a white gless and tempered it in millet water. When it was done he festered it in place and hung the visit mer he fastened it in place and hung the vest over his shoulders testing its fit. His slave said to him, 'Master, the armor becomes you.' Numukeba answered, 'Iron does not turn away weapons because it "becomes" but because it contains the life force of the sun. And the since answered, 'Yes, Master, it is 90.'

Because the epic form is so familiar, the language between setting out and coming home must truly sparkle to distinguish the work. Courlander's does not. But it is steady and functional; while not lyrical, it trots along at an even gait. It can move large spaces of time with a few gracefully tossed sentences. With the affecting line "I am Numakeba, I am here," Courlander places his hero in a great tradition of literary cries of "I am," of finding the central self through advancing. self through adversity.

Men no longer venture forth on horseback uses search of truth. But they do wrestle with their own faith. This is neither a bona fide African epic nor a purely historical work. It is a gentle. quiet tale about a man "who understands the mysteries of iron" and his quest to understand his own fate.

For some time now Browne's forte has been to milk the Queen's Indian Defense of gallons of points, no matter whether he has Black or White. One can see him at it again in his encounter with Predrag Ni-

New Zealand Banks Back Plan to Open the Market

WELLINGTON - New Zealand banks said Monday that they welcomed government propos-als to end restrictions on the number of domestic or foreign banks allowed to operate in the country.

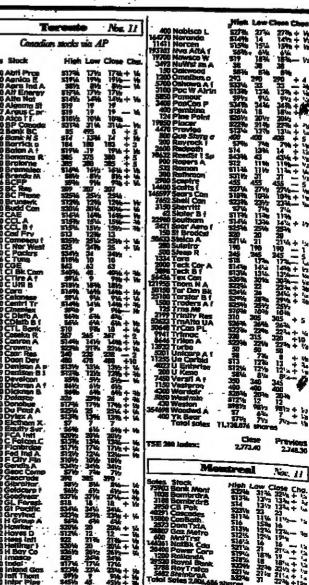

The Bankers' Association president, Jim Macanlay, said that deregulation was a logical step by the government to restructure the financial sector. He said terms of the deregulation would be "consistent with the government's own objectives of protecting the integrity of the payments system as a whole, and with a fair and independent valuetion of the costs of operating one of the most efficient and lowest-cost clearing systems in the world."

Finance Minister Roger Douglas said Sunday that banking licenses would be granted to any applicant with an issued capital base of 30 million New Zealand dollars ($17.5 million) and a fully paid up capital of 15 million dollars that has proper banking credentials after new laws have been passed.

He said the central bank would also be given the participations of the contral bank would also be given the participations.

MONTREAL — The Soviet Union's monopoly on gold medals at the World Gymnastics Championships was ended Sunday, with Tong Fei and Li Ning of China, Daniela Silvas of Romania and Gabriele Fahnrich of East Germany winning titles on the closing day of competition.

But Soviet gymnasis continued their domination of the weeklong event, winning nine of the 30 medals awarded Sunday in addition to the men's and women's Fahnrich scored 9.950 on the bars to beat out teammate Dagmar Kersten. The Soviet Union did not have a competitor in this event because of the controversial decision Saturday to pull Irina Baraksanova and Olga Mostepanova out of the all-around final in favor of Omeliantchik and Shoushounova.

Ecaterina Szabo of Romania, who won four golds and a silver at the Olympics, managed only two

Montreal, Winnipeg Win in CFL

MONTREAL — Quarterback Joe Barnes passed for almost 400 yards Sunday and rookie Tony Johns scored touchdowns on runs of 3 and 1 yards as the Montreal Concordes beat the Ottawa Rough Riders, 30-20, in the Canadian Football League's East Division semifinal playoff.

In the West Division semifinal, the Winnipeg Blue Bombers survived six turnovers to defeat the visiting Edmonton Eskimos, 22-15. as the wide receiver James Murphy scored twice.

A crowd of 11,372 - well below expectations — shivered through freezing temperatures in Montreal, but Barnes and his teammates gave the spectators much to cheer in the last 17 minutes when the Concordes broke open a 16-13 game.

They took a 23-13 lead just before the third quarter ended, with Barnes throwing a 20-yard touchdown pass to Nick Arakgi, his favorite target in the game. Arakgi shook free from two would-be tacklers to score.

Barnes then engineered a five-play, 63-yard touchdown drive that ended with Johns scoring from the one 3:56 into the fourth quarter. The Montreal quarterback, playing in his fifth game since being acquired on Sept. 30 from the Calgary Stampeders, expertly used the screen pass — with one to Johns gaining 23 yards — to move the Concordes down the field.

In Winnipeg, Manitoba, the de-fending Grey Cup champion Blue Bombers scored their winning points after consecutive turnovers late in the third quarter, when they were trailing by 15-14.

Winnipeg's wide receiver Jeff Boyd fumbled the ball and Edmonton recovered near its goal line, but on the next play the Eskimos' run-ning back Milson Jones fumbled and Winnipeg recovered, then got a touchdown on the next play.

With five minutes left in the game, Winnipeg's defense stopped the Eskimos on a third-and-three gamble at the Bombers' eight-yard line to ensure victory.

The Bombers lost four of six fumbles during a game played in 16-degree (minus 9 Celsius) temperature and quarterback Tom Clements threw two interceptions. The Eskimos lost two of three fumbles and their rookie quarterback, Damon Allen, who had replaced the injured Matt Dunigan, threw two

It was the third year in a row that Winnipeg had played host to Ed-monton in the West semifinal and

Tony Peters knocked down a pass intended for the Cowboys' Doug Cosbie, but at game's end it was the Redskins who likely had been knocked out of the playoffs by a 13-7 defeat.

There are no cheerleaders at the Coast Guard Academy. The freshman class, known collectively as the Swabs, is traditionally assigned by upper classmen to cheer loud and long. Every cadet is required to attend every home game. There is a reason: Not many others show up.

Whenever Coast Guard scores, all the freshmen pour out of the stands and run behind a goal post, where each swab does as many pushups as the home team's score to that point.

Coast Guard has two nicknames, Cadets and Bears. A real live bear was the team's mascot for 58 years - actually, there were 31 bears in that period - until last year, when Connecticut banned the ownership of dangerous wild animals except by zoos and laboratories.

It seemed, with only 66 seconds remaining, that the Jets had ended the Dolphins' dominance of the American Football Conference's Eastern Division. They took a 17-14 lead on a 20-yard touchdown pass into the outstretched arms of

Bui Dan Marino spotted Mark Duper, activated only Saturday, in a one-on-one matchup with the defensive back Bobby Jackson and hit him for a juggled, 50-yard touchdown pass with 41 seconds left that gave the Dolphins to a 21-17 victory

Duper, playing his first game since breaking a leg two contests into the season, had caught a 60-yard pass for Miami's first touchdown, in the second quarter. He set a club record of 217 yards with eight receptions, helping Miami avoid losing a third straight game for the first time in nine seasons.

The Jets' defense had to battle injuries as well as Marino and his receivers. Kirk Springs, the strong safety, was hurt early and replaced by the rookie Rich Miano. The regular right cornerback, Russell Carter, was sidelined prior to the game with a back injury; another rookie, Kerry Glenn, started.

Pat Leahy, the Jets' kicker, had his problems, too, missing on field goal tries from 41, 37 and 42 yards. Cowboys 13, Redskins 7: Tony Dorsett tied a team record with his 76th touchdown and Rafael Septien kicked two field goals to keep Dallas tied for first place in the NFC East, United Press International reported from Washington.

Dorsett, a nine-year veteran, scored on a 48-yard pass from Danny White with Dallas leading, 6-0. early in the third period. Dorsett beat the linebacker Monte Coleman, activated off the injured list only Saturday, on a delay play down the middle of the field and tied Bob Hayes' team record.

Joe Theismann, the Redskins' quarterback who threw five interception's during the defending NFC champions' season-opening 44-14 defeat in Dallas, was only 14of-31 passing with three intercep-tions. He was sacked six times for losses of 52 yards, with the defensive end Jim Jeffcoat getting live sacks to set a team record.

Dallas held the NFL's No. 1 ground game in check, limiting the Redskins to 124 yards rushing.

John Riggins, with his second carry of the game, moved past O.J. Simpson into fourth place on the all-time NFL rushing list. Riggins, ries — and had only one in the second half — has 11,261 yards to Simpson's 11.236.

ART BUCHWALD How to Lose a Defector

WASHINGTON — The spook community in Washington is talking of nothing but the turnabout of the Soviet spy Vitaly Yurchenko. Only a few months ago he was the CIA's prize Soviet canary. Then, without warning, he turned up at the Soviet Embassy and announced he was going home.

Forget his story about being drugged and kidnapped. The truth is that Yurchenko was not tortured but was badly handled by the CIA. It was not Vitaly's love for the motherland that drove him back to Moscow but disenchantment with the American way

This is what Buchwald happened. Yurchenko, while in Rome, was persuaded to defect by a CIA agent who offered the KGB officer wine. woman and song, not necessarily in "Sing to us, dear Yurchenko," the CIA man said. "and we promise you riches beyond your dreams: a safe house. S1 million in cash, a gold American Express card and a free trip to Hawaii for two, ground

Yurchenko, who had always wanted to see Hawaii, accepted. He was immediately flown to Langley. Virginia, to be debriefed and tested for AIDS. As for his $1 million, the CIA people said they would invest transportation and gratuities not it for him in a good tax shelter. Then the counterespionage boys went to work. "Sing to us. Vitaly. sing to us the names of moles and double agents and spies who are still out in the cold." Yurchenko started to sing in the beautiful baritone that only great Soviet defectors possess. Ail went well until Yurchenko demanded the safe house he had been promised. A CIA real estate and loan banks are solvent and agent took him to the Virginia which ones aren't. If you had come countryside. They drove up to a to me earlier I would have tipped dirty, gray, weather-beaten cabin with broken windows, rotting stairs

That did it for Yurchenko. Since with broken windows, rotting stairs and a large hole in the roof. "What's safe about this house?" Yurchenko said.

The KGB would never think of buy it for $500,000."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

"We always make our defectors pay for their safe houses. The CIA is not in business for its health." replied the agent. "Look, we're not taking advantage of you because you're a dirty commie traitor. Every house in Virginia sells for Yurchenko bought the shack from the CIA and received an advance of $150,000 to fix it up. Unfortunately just when he got the house the way he wanted it the KGB found out where he lived and burned it down on Halloween. Yurchenko escaped out the back window and three hours later arrived at CIA headquarters shaking. He demanded that his money be returned since the house wasn't safe at all. The matter went as high as the director of the Covert Real Estate Division, who told him that the Central Intelligence Agency had a firm policy: As long as the house was safe when the CIA sold it to a defector, the agency was not responsible for the KGB burning it

Yurchenko was hurt and con-

The CIA put him up in a Holiday Inn and said, "Sing Yurchenko, and you'll find a BMW in front of your door and a girl like the one in the Calvin Klein ads,"

So Yurchenko sang some more. He would still be singing if the CLA had not made a tremendous blunder. They had invested the rest of Vitaly's money in a Maryland savings and loan association. When Yurchenko went to make a withdrawal the cashier told him they had run out of money and slammed the window in his face.

Enraged, the spy returned to Langley and confronted William Casey. The director said there was nothing he could do. "The CIA has no intelligence as to which savings he was wiped out he decided to return to Moscow and face the music. His last words as he boarded the plane were. "I don't want to live looking for you here. We'll let you in a country where your savings aren't insured by the FDIC.

Hollywood Nervously Confronts AIDS

By Aljean Harmetz

New York Times Service

T OS ANGELES — Until the announcement in July that Rock Hudson had AIDS, the film industry had been under no special pressure to address the social consequences of the disease.

But his illness and death, because it sharpened Hollywood's awareness of its vulnerability, has triggered a reaction that has created problems for the industry. Some now expect a rethinking of the way sex is depicted in movies while others fear severe discrimination against homosexual actors.

Reflecting these concerns, the Directors Guild of America will discuss taking an official position on acquired immune deficiency syndrome at its national board meeting this month. The American Federation of Television and Radio Artists has informed its members in a letter that they "should and do have the right to refuse contact with anyone whom they believe may have any communicable disease." Since some institutions are testing for AIDS, the federation also told members that "no company has the right to ask for blood tests as condition for employment."

The Screen Actors Guild added to the sense of alarm by calling open-mouthed kissing a possible health hazard and requiring actors to be told if they will be asked to play such scenes.

"I think there could be a purge against homosexuals," said William Goldman, screenwriter on films such as "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid." "A gay actor friend of mine who has lost 11 friends to AIDS says he is already feeling a backlash."

Joseph Morgenstern, a screenwriter and columnist, said: "Gay actors are absolutely terrified by this, in the depths of despair. It's only my speculation, but I think a de facto blacklist may well emerge."

The fear is that the spread of AIDS will lead to public identification of homosexuals. Few gay producers, directors, high-level studio executives and writers have publicly an-nounced their homosexuality. Gay actors hide their sexual preference because they are under pressure to appear in real life to be the macho lovers they portray on screen. Lesserknown actors are unlikely to be chosen by casting directors if they admit their homosexuality, said Michael Kearns, one of Hollywood's few openly gay actors.

"Often, they'll even wear wedding rings to auditious," said Chris Uszler, president of the Alliance of Gay and Lesbian Artists. Nationally, homosexuals have accounted for more than 70 percent of the more than 14,000 known cases of AIDS. Federal authorities have identified homosexuals, intravenous drug users and hemophiliacs as the groups at highest risk of carrying the AIDS virus, which is spread through intimate sexual contact or the blood.

Hollywood's historical insecurity and sensitivity to political and social trends has frequently caused the industry to react with panic. The inability of the silent-film star Fatty Arbuckle to get a job after being acquitted of manslaughter charges, the restrictive production code of the 1930s and the political blacklist of the McCarthy era are obvious examples. In his book "Senator Joe McCarthy," Richard H. Rovere wrote that Hollywood was vulnerable to the senator's accusations precisely because "Hollywood has always been a hotbed of conformity."

The panic is because all of Hollywood is based on fantasy," said Goldman. "It's not just because an actor is hiding being gay. These gorgeous men and women are supposed to be perfect."

Gilbert Cates, president of the directors' guild, said: "An actor who has AIDS or suspects he has AIDS has an obligation as an act of good citizenship not to do a kissing scene. No amount of legislation will deal with that problem.

The actor Charlton Heston went further. "I think a member of that lovely euphemism 'a high-risk group' has an obligation to refuse to

Although not willing to be quoted, several important industry figures expressed dismay that Hudson had played love scenes with Linda Evans on the television series "Dynasty" after he knew he was ill. But because refusing might disclose that he was homosex-ual, "it might be very difficult for a gay actor to refuse a part that required open-mouth kissing," said Uszler of the Gay Alliance. The Screen Actors Guild has a clause in its contract that prohibits discrimination because of sexual preference. Some female members of the guild have expressed concern about playing love scenes opposite gay actors, since the AIDS virus has been discov-

The new guild ruling attempted to prevent discrimination by not telling an actor or actress whom he or she was expected to kiss. The response has been that this is unworkable and unenforceable. "It's absurd," said Aaron Spelling, producer of "Dynasty." When a show is cast, he said, "first you get a star, and then you get a leading lady. It's absurd to think you could keep Paul Newman or Tom Selleck a secret."

ered in saliva

Although there is no documented case of AIDS having been transmitted through kissing experts are unwilling to say that the disease cannot be transmitted through the kind of passionate, open-mouthed kisses that love scenes often require. Federal experts from the Centers for Disease Control have camioned against intimate sexual contact. including kissing that involves exchange of saliva, with members of high-risk groups.

Even if open-mouthed kissing were banned the industry considers this unlikely people feel that movies and television would imply show sex in other ways. Thomas Kersey, ABC's vice president of broadcast standards and practices on the West Coast, said ABC's policies already forbid open-mouthed kissing. "We advise our producers that the French kiss is unacceptable," he said. "If we see a tongue flashing, we will edit it out." The policies at NBC and CBS are less restrictive. "We simply make a judgment when a romantic situation gets excessive, said Ralph Daniels, vice president of broad-cast standards at NBC. "We decide case by case," said George Schweitzer, vice president of communications for the CRS Broadcast Group.

This whole thing is a tough call," said Dawn Steel, president of production at Para-mount. "I think exciting sexuality is part of the fantasy, part of the entertainment of a love story. I would hope it won't be withdrawn."

A Los Angeles program to test blood sam-ples for presence of AIDS virus antibodies, a sign of possible infection, is too new to have come up with definitive statistics, said Dr. Martin Finn, medical director for public health for Los Angeles County. He said, however, that in a men's study at UCLA in which homosexual participants were self-selected and thus worried about the possibility of AIDS, 54 percent tested positive for exposure to the virus.

Scientists presume that infected individuals, although healthy, can infect others.
